F033914 People v. Black

F038143 In re John Nicholas Black On Habeas Corpus

The petition for writ of habeas corpus is denied. The matter is remanded for a new hearing on defendant's motion to suppress. If the court denies the motion, it may simply reinstate the judgment. If the motion to suppress is granted in whole or in part, the court must determine whether exclusion of the evidence makes it reasonably probable defendant would receive a more favorable result in a new trial. If so, the court shall order a new trial on those charges affected by the excluded evidence. Wiseman, J.

I concur: Cornell, J.

Dissenting opinion by Dibiaso, Acting P. J.
